ABSTRACT

Reported are the results of a survey of 98,000 engineers taken to be representative of approximately 500,000 members of engineering societies. Data analysis was done on 59,200 usable questionnaires. The list is believed to have included about 40 percent of the engineers in the nation. A facsimile questionnaire is reproduced at the end of the report. Included in the data are highest degree, age, employment status, curriculum of highest degree, sex, citizenship, degree year of first degree, type of employer, field of specialization, product or service area, area of technology, job function, and geographic location. The data are reported, where appropriate, for 1970 and 1971. This survey was conducted for the National Science Foundation. (TS)

INTRODUCTION

The National Survey of Engineering Employment

As the economic situation worsened during 1970 and 1971 and overall unemployment rates climbed, Engineers Joint Council urged the government to undertake a comprehensive survey in order to provide reliable statistics on the extent and nature of the employment problem. In May 1971 the National Science Foundation launched a survey of some 300,000 scientists and commissioned EJC to put together a special mailing list consisting of the combined and unduplicated membership rolls of twenty-three engineering societies that were broadly representative of all major disciplines and specialties in the United States. The societies included are listed on page 7 of this report. From this list, which included approximately 500,000 names and addresses, a sample consisting of every fifth name was drawn. Questionnaires were mailed to the resulting set of 98,000 individuals. By early August a response rate of 65 percent had been obtained and 59,200 usable questionnaires were prepared for computer analysis.

It should be noted that the survey was intended to be representative of engineering society members but not necessarily the total U.S. engineering population. The mailing list is believed to have included about 40 percent of the engineers in the nation. In view of the membership standards of the professional societies, the survey respondents constitute a better qualified, more experienced, and more professionally oriented group than engineers as a whole.

Those engineers who do not hold membership in a national professional engineering society are outside the scope of this survey. Since a selected portion of the total engineering population was sampled, the absolute numbers for any variable should not be considered as national totals. The percentage relationships developed in the survey, however, are considered to be representative for the members of engineering societies. The procedures used do not permit estimation of population totals in terms of the individual variables.

The survey is subject to sampling errors, response errors, nonresponse bias, and bias inherent in the mail list from which the sample was drawn. With respect to sampling errors alone, the error range depends upon both the size of the cell examined and the percentage of cases within the cell with a particular characteristic. For example, the unemployment rate for all respondents, 3.0 percent, has a sampling error range of ± 0.1 percent at the 90-percent confidence level. A cell with about 1,400 responses and an unemployment rate of 2.9 percent has a sampling error range of ± 0.7 percent at the 90-percent confidence level. Biases introduced by response errors and nonresponse have not been measured, but respondents show characteristics similar to those reported in a 1969 survey using an Engineers Joint Council mailing list closely resembling the one used for this survey.

A summary of the statistical findings of the engineers' employment survey was published on September 23, 1971 by the National Science Foundation in Science Resources Studies Highlights, "Unemployment Rate for Engineers, June-July 1971," NSF 71-33. A similar survey of scientists was conducted and preliminary results published in Science Resources Studies Highlights, "Unemployment Rates for Scientists, Spring, 1971," NSF 71-26, dated July 2, 1971.

A full report containing more detailed data on the respondents to these employment surveys will be available at a later date from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office.

Instructions for the Use of the Data Tables in This Report

The tables in this report give the numbers of survey respondents according to characteristics set forth in the questionnaires. For details regarding the wording of specific questions, refer to the facsimile questionnaire reproduced at the end of this report. The data are presented in the form of a "total" column and seven "populations" whose composition is described below. Roman numerals I to XXXI identify the characteristics analyzed, with the exception that table XXIV, which gave the SMSA (Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area as delineated by the U.S. Department of Labor) of respondents' employment in March 1970 has been omitted to save space.

The seven "populations" included in this report were selected as the most generally useful of those produced by the National Science Foundation and are defined as follows:

Population W - Engineering related employed
Population X - Nonengineering related employed
Population P - Full-time employed, engineering related

Population N - Part-time employed, engineering related, indicating "YES" to seeking full-time employment

Population S - Full-time employed, nonengineering related, and checked item 7 in question 11b of survey form (engineering related position not available.)

Population U - Part-time employed, nonengineering related, indicating "YES" to seeking full-time employment and checked item 7 in question 11b of survey form (engineering related position not available.)

Population G - Not employed and seeking employment.

The relationships that exist among the various populations can be seen in section I of the data table, "Employment Status, 1971." Other important combinations are as follows:

Populations W plus X plus G equal the "labor force" as defined by the U.S. Department of Labor.

The "Total" column minus the labor force gives the number of survey respondents who were retired, or unemployed and not seeking employment. (These populations are not shown in the data tables to save space.)

The "unemployment rate" as defined by the U.S. Department of Labor is equal to Population G divided by the labor force.

Populations N plus S plus U plus G equal the "employment problem" group as defined by Engineers Joint Council.

Population P plus the "employment problem" group constitutes the total in or seeking full-time engineering work.

The "employment problem" rate as defined by Engineers Joint Council is equal to the "employment problem" group divided by the total in or seeking full-time engineering work, or

$$\frac{N + S + U + G}{P + N + S + U + G}$$

Illustrative computations of the unemployment rate and the "employment problem" rate for the entire survey are as follows:
